

Afraid of Everything

Helena Carr is afraid of everything. After a crisis at work, she quits her job and feels lost. Its time for a serious change, to beat the extreme anxiety that has plagued her since childhood. Something different, unplanned and radical. Sell her house, move to a foreign location, turn her routine upside down to end this emotionally paralyzing fear. Before Helena can act on her options, theres a terrible accident on a Southern California freeway. Instead of going on an exotic vacation, she finds herself in a hospital, in a coma, traveling to strange worlds in another dimension, meeting people who seem to know more about her than she knows about herself. As Helena explores this intriguing new world, she realizes the truth about her past and the purpose of her future. And she is no longer afraid. At last she is ready to live. But first, she must wake up from the coma.
